to, Maria," he suggested. "What is the use for me to pinch myself, if you spend all you get?" smiled Maria so "I want to have the good of the money while it is going, as well as you."

"All right, my dear," he replied.

There was no improvement in the woman, and Edward had some doubts as to the consequences, but what puzzled him most was to know what became of the money. Another year passed by, and the danger of running in debt stared him in the face.

"Maria we are living too fast, I am afraid," he observed, in a melancholly mood. "I am afraid we are; for yesterday you brought home a pair of chickens for which you paid twenty cents a pound," replied Maria, with her usual smile. "Pool, Maria, I don't mean these little things. We must have something to est, and while my salary is two thousand dollars a year I mean to live well." "Great trees from little acorns grow, added the wife.

tailor's bill had been reduced one-half, all other bills in like proportion. Better than all, he had been cured of grumbling at Maria, for if he complained of anything she was sure to ask him for a fifty dellar bill on the same day. In fact he was afraid of her.

Maria, in her demands for money, was more remorseless during the last year than ever before; and had actually taken eight hundred dollars out of his two thousand. And there was not much show for it in the house or upon her person. If he hinted at an explanation, she always turned off so sweetly and admitty that he could not re-

Sixteen hundred dollars money in hand, was a large sum to Edward, who spent everything as fast as he got it. He felt like a new man, like a rich man. What a treas-ure was Maria, who, besides being pretty, sweet tempered and devoted, was a thoro' fi-nanciet. For my part I should like a financier on any other terms. A prudent, but growling, ill-tempered shrew would be my abomination.

The Raymond place, and a delightful place it was, immediately came into Edward's possession. It is paid for now, and our friends are as happy as during the honeymoon.

"Here it is. exchanged the doctor points and even condescended to smile.

"Edward, I want fifty dollars to-morrow," said Maria.

To Edward's astonishment it was the This was rather a remarkable request for the eareful little woman to make, for she was very prudent in regard to her private expenses.

"Cortainly, Maria," replied Edward, "I hope you are going to buy a new silk."

There it is. exchanged the doctor points ing to a paper.

To Edward's astonishment it was the burg was found doad with his throat cut, and a birdy knife in his hand. The Coroner's July rendered a verdict of suicide.—

The Pittsburg Gazette says that on preparing the body for burial a four-penny nail was found driven in the crown of the dead man's head.

He handed her the money and hoped she would dress herself a great deal better than ever before, for he could afford it.

Amount.

Three years from the time of Edward's introduction to the reader had passed away, and his finances were in no better condition.
